Good morning Ms. Thomas (and Happy Friday!),

It was so great meeting you yesterday at the Howard University Job and Internship Fair. I thoroughly enjoyed hearing you speak on the panel and even speaking with you individually afterwards. Thank you for simply taking the time to share with us!

I hope that you remember my shining face, the young lady from Birmingham, Alabama who is all things sass (and skill ☺). But just in case you might have forgotten (because I know you talked to countless students) my name is Jacquaniese Washington but I go by Jaye and I am a junior at Delaware State University majoring in Mass Communications.

I remember you sharing that you are from Huntsville, Alabama which led me to share that I spent my summer there last year interning in NASA's Office of Strategic Analysis and Communications; and as I mentioned, I would LOVE to hear about the connections that you have in Huntsville. Although Alabama can be a bore (besides the nice parks and the great food that my grandma cooks), and I wasn't planning on going back, I will pack my apartment up and get on the first flight to Birmingham so quick if an opportunity had my name on it.

I am attaching my resume for your review and sharing. I would love to be as well connected as you are. And as you said yesterday, two years at a station back home is fine and well because ultimately, that's how you get to the bigger networks.

I know that you are a busy woman but I look forward to hearing from you soon and communicating more.

Thank you!

With much southern love and adoration,

Jaye Washington

P.S.- I hope you like the subject line! I know how us southern woman are.
